Emily Bode

Emily Bode is a graduate of the Rhode Island School of Design. After graduating, she worked as a designer for several fashion brands, including Marc Jacobs and Ralph Lauren. In 2016, she launched her own brand, Bode.

Bode's designs are often inspired by her personal experiences and memories. She grew up in a family of collectors, and she has always been fascinated by the stories behind old objects. Bode's clothes are often made from vintage and antique fabrics, and she often uses found objects to create her designs.

Bode's Sustainability

Bode is committed to sustainability. The brand uses vintage and antique fabrics whenever possible, and it recycles and upcycles materials. Bode also works with local manufacturers to reduce its environmental impact.

Bode's sustainability efforts have been recognized by the industry. In 2019, the brand was awarded the CFDA Sustainability Award.

Bode's Designs

Bode's designs are often inspired by American workwear and sportswear. The brand's clothes are often made from durable fabrics, such as denim and canvas, and they often feature functional details, such as pockets and zippers.

Bode's designs are also known for their unique and innovative details. The brand often uses unexpected materials and textures, and it often combines different styles and eras.

Bode's Collaborations

Bode has collaborated with a number of other brands, including Nike, New Balance, and Lemaire. These collaborations have allowed Bode to reach a wider audience and to explore new design possibilities.

Bode's collaborations have been praised for their creativity and originality. The brand has been able to successfully combine its own unique aesthetic with the styles of other brands.

Bode's Future

Bode is a rising star in the fashion industry. The brand has been praised for its unique and innovative approach to menswear, and it is committed to sustainability. Bode is poised to continue to grow and evolve in the years to come.
