Whether you're a seasoned angler or just starting out, there are always new techniques and strategies you can learn to improve your gamefishing skills. In this article, we'll share some of our favorite tips, tactics, and advice on how to catch more and bigger gamefish.

1. Know Your Quarry

The first step to catching any fish is to learn as much as you can about its behavior, habitat, and feeding habits. This information will help you choose the right bait, lures, and techniques for the job.

For example, if you're targeting tuna, you'll want to fish in areas where tuna are known to feed, such as near schools of baitfish. You'll also want to use lures or baitfish that mimic the size and shape of the tuna's prey.

2. Use the Right Gear

Having the right gear is essential for successful gamefishing. This includes a good quality rod and reel, as well as a variety of lures and bait.

When choosing a rod, you'll want to consider the type of fish you're targeting, as well as the size and weight of the fish. You'll also want to make sure that the rod is comfortable to use and has enough backbone to handle the fish's weight.

When choosing a reel, you'll want to consider the size of the fish you're targeting, as well as the amount of line you'll need to hold. You'll also want to make sure that the reel is smooth and has a good drag system.

3. Find the Fish

Once you have the right gear, you need to find the fish. This can be done by using a variety of techniques, such as trolling, casting, or jigging.

Trolling involves dragging a lure or bait behind your boat. This is a good way to cover a lot of water and find fish that are holding in deeper water.

Casting involves throwing a lure or bait into a specific area. This is a good way to target fish that are holding in shallow water or near structure.

Jigging involves dropping a lure or bait straight down to the bottom and then jigging it up and down. This is a good way to target fish that are holding in deep water or near the bottom.

4. Present Your Bait or Lure Properly

Once you've found the fish, you need to present your bait or lure properly. This means using the right size, shape, and color of bait or lure, as well as the right retrieve.

For example, if you're targeting tuna, you'll want to use a large, flashy lure that mimics the size and shape of the tuna's prey. You'll also want to retrieve the lure quickly and erratically.

5. Set the Hook and Fight the Fish

Once you've got a fish on the line, it's important to set the hook properly and fight the fish until it's tired. This can be a challenge, especially if the fish is large and powerful.

To set the hook, you'll want to use a quick, sharp motion. Once the hook is set, you'll need to fight the fish until it's tired. This can be done by reeling in the line slowly and steadily, and by applying pressure to the fish's mouth.

6. Land the Fish

Once the fish is tired, you'll need to land it. This can be done by using a net, a gaff, or by hand.

If you're using a net, you'll want to scoop the fish into the net from the side. If you're using a gaff, you'll want to hook the fish in the jaw and then lift it out of the water.

If you're landing the fish by hand, you'll need to grab the fish firmly by the lower jaw and then lift it out of the water.

These are just a few tips, tactics, and advice on how to catch more and bigger gamefish. By following these tips, you'll be well on your way to becoming a successful gamefisherman.
